All That Matters

When all that matters shall be written down
And the long record of our years is told,

Where sham, like flesh,
must perish and grow
cold;

When the tomb closes on our fair renown

And priest and layman, sage and motleyed
clown

Must quit the places which they dearly hold,

What to our credit shall we find enscribed?

And what shall be the jewels of our crown?

I fancy we shall hear to our surprise

Some little deeds of kindness, long forgot,

Telling our glory, and the brave and wise

Deeds which we boasted often, mentioned not.

God gave us life not just to buy and sell,

And all that matters is to live it well.

This collection of poems embraces Mr. Guest's most notable work of recent years—1920, '21 and '22. Of the nearly three score poems, twenty-one are illustrated with full page pictures from paintings and drawings by a group of foremost American illustrators.

No other book of contemporaneous verse is embellished with so distinguished an array of artistic talent.

HARVARD PROBLEM BOOKS

Used in the Case System of Business Training

THIS series, written by members of the faculty of the Graduate School of Business Administration, Harvard University, marks a definite departure from the ordinary type of business text-book. Instead of giving a discussion of the principles of the subject, it adapts the case method of instruction, standard in law schools, and presents for analysis actual problems in the form in which they have come before business men. These problems contain much new and significant informative matter and are accompanied by questions and references to supplementary readings. Written primarily for study classes, these books are proving most useful as texts in colleges and universities, and in group meetings of executives in private concerns and trade associations. Business men should find them useful in clarifying their own problems.

Marketing Problems

By M. T. COPELAND, Ph.D.

THIS study includes the activities of retail and wholesale merchants, manufacturers' sales organizations, the various agencies engaged in the distribution of raw materials, and other means of facilitating and promoting the sale of merchandise. 363 pages. Cloth. Net, $4

Problems in Business Finance

By E. E. LINCOLN, M.A. (Oxon.) Ph.D.

THESE problems of financial operation, taken from the actual experiences of a large number of concerns, contain much new and significant material, and comprehend those problems now pressing for solution in most concerns, whether large or small. The effect both of the type of industry and of the Business Cycle on financial policies is particularly stressed. 547 pages. Cloth. Net, $5

Problems in Sales Management

By H. R. TOSDAL, Ph.D.

IN this book the author shows the application of scientific principles to the newer field of distribution or sales management in manufacturing and wholesale concerns. 637 pages. Cloth. Net, $5

Retail Store Management Problems

By D. K. DAVID, M.B.A.

THE aim of this book is to present, by means of carefully collected and coordinated cases, the management problems of a retail store which arise in shaping its merchandise and non-merchandise policies. All of the problems have been gathered first-hand from 300 retail stores. The topics considered include accounting, statistics, organization, merchandise problems, selling, stock, buying, personnel, finance, price policies, and general administrative policy. The book also includes a bibliography of important books on the subject of Retailing. 1,050 pages. Cloth. Net, $6.75

Problems in Export Sales Management

By H. R. TOSDAL, Ph.D.

IN this book the author presents for analysis and decision a series of real problems gathered first-hand from concerns doing an export business. He recognizes that fundamentally selling problems are much the same, whether one is engaged in domestic transactions solely or is dealing with buyers located in foreign markets and brings out at every opportunity the differences in circumstances upon which decisions are based. 700 pages. There Are Literally Millions Of Potential Buyers For

WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT

By Jeremiah Whipple Jenks, Ph.D.,LLD. and Rufus Daniel Smith, M. A.

"The Moving Picture Shackled to the Printed Page"

A LARGE CIRCULATION

AND ADDS

It Is Going To Have It

The Sunday Republican, Waterbury, Conn., says:

"These United States would unquestionably be a better place to live in if all citizens would read WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT. It would give those who do not understand the operation of our government an opportunity to realize with those who do that they are citizens of the best nation on the earth."

For what parent wouldn't buy a book for the children from which the complete story of so intricate a subject as government can be obtained, to quote the New York Evening Post, "from the pictures and captions alone"?

Yet as the New York World says: "WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT will be found both interesting and educational by readers long past the school age."

Cleveland Topics:

In an attempt to reach the man who represents a class that is not in the habit of buying many books but who does patronize the moving pictures and who follows the daily press and popular magazines, every effort has been made to secure his attention to this book by incorporating in its pages the features that go to make his favorite paper, his popular magazine and his moving picture theatre attractive to him and to his family.

The New York Times:

The authors reveal an unusual insight into the minds of those whom they are trying to instruct. They are never condescending, never patronizing, never toplofty, never polysyllabic. They have produced a book which could be read with advantage by not a few native sons of native sons."

The Columbus Citizen:

WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT contains more real live vital facts than almost any work we've seen on how our government functions. Paradoxically speaking, it is an interesting text book."

The St. Louis Star:

The entire text is repeated in a running series of new pictures, virtually putting the whole outward side of American government and social institutions before the reader.

Industry:

The main emphasis throughout is placed on ideas vital to an understanding of the actual everyday workings of our Government, rather than on a purely encyclopedic statement.

Amazing Reception in the Schools

Although it has been off the press but a few weeks, it is rapidly being introduced into public and private schools from the elementary grades through the university. Teachers are enthusiastic about it because it lifts the study from a deadening task to a living experience.

Display It Children's Book Week—Nov. 12-18

'The American Boy,' a magazine reaching close to a million boys, has announced a program designed to interest boys and girls in public affairs related to the schools. 'Boys' Life,' the Boy Scout Magazine, will undertake a campaign in good citizenship. Everywhere constructive efforts are being made to build clean politics in America by interesting boys and girls in the subject. Parents and teachers are devoting themselves to the subject. Feature WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT during Children's Book Week.

"I hope the reading of 'We and Our Government' will not be limited to our alien class. It is needed among native-born Americans more than among aliens. The latter, at least, want to think highly of this country and its government when they come here—they are predisposed to do so—but the native Americans unfortunately take their country and their government too much merely as a matter of course."—GRIFFITH OGDEN ELLIS, Editor, The American Boy.

A Timely Book for American Education Week—December 3-9

The most timely and appropriate book to feature on Citizenship Day and during Education Week is WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT. Better citizenship, founded on American ideals, is the key-note of the movement in which the press, public spirited citizens, government officials, the schools and organizations—the American Legion, the National Education Association, the United States Bureau of Education, the Boy Scouts, the Sentinels, the League of Women Voters, the Knights of Columbus, and others—are co-operating. Tie up your sales efforts with this movement. Turn this nation-wide interest into wide sales. Sell WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT, which is published in conjunction with the educational activities of the United States Department of Labor.

The American Viewpoint Society is authorized by the Secretary of the U. S. Department of Labor to state that the work it is undertaking in the production of books and educational films for the citizenship classes throughout the United States is done in co-operation with and in furtherance of the policies and plans of the Department in its citizenship training work.

FOR THE CHRISTMAS TRADE

The Christmas shopper seeking the distinctive book, beautiful in format and binding and combining withal interesting and informative reading, cannot well resist the appeal of WE AND OUR GOVERNMENT. THE WHELPS OF THE WOLF

by George Marsh

Author of "Toilers of the Trails"

Do you love the smell of wood smoke? Have you seen the mist lift from a wilderness lake at sunrise? Have you camped beneath a northern moon and heard the geese up under the stars riding the first stinging winds? Have your eyes watched the pulse and glow of the phantom lights over the pole? Then you will thrill with old memories at this tale of Jean Marcel, and his great dog, Fleur, as you follow the flash of his paddle on the East Coast of Hudson's Bay and his sled trail into the barrens in his fight for life through the starving moons of the long snows.

And their battle up the coast into the barrage of a white norther, for the love of Julie Breton, will leave you with racing pulse and wet eyes.

A BOOKSELLER'S AUTHOR

From the days of PARNASSUS ON WHEELS and THE HAUNTED BOOKSHOP Christopher Morley's books have been favorites among the booksellers.

Where the Blue Begins

is his new book, an immediate success. To save time and get quickly to the point, we quote only two or three from many comments.

Heywood Brown says:

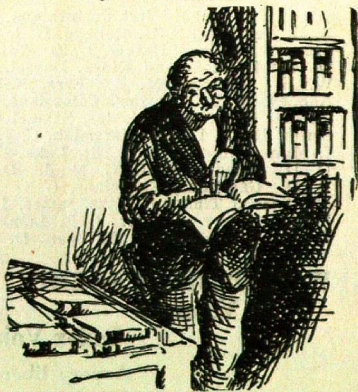

"Where the Blue Begins' checks up the life of America fully as sharply as does 'Babbitt.' There is a difference in method and we prefer Morley's way. Fantasy seems to us a better vehicle for satire than naturalism. . . . Morley does in a few pages what Lewis cannot accomplish short of many chapters. . . . We are of the opinion that fantasy is the highest form of prose expression, and Morley has not only chosen high ground but has traversed it magnificently. . . . In a little more than 200 pages Morley has managed to deal with man's relation to business, home and God and, more than that, to round out his theme."

A prominent University Professor says:

"There is something refreshingly crisp and of the early morning in the tone and style throughout. . . . You must have had a good time writing the book. In fact, most of your writing gives the impression that you are rather specializing in having a good time. To that high profession many are called, few chosen; and I congratulate you on being one of the few."

Ted Robinson (in the Cleveland PLAIN DEALER) says:

"Something a reviewer cannot put into a pigeonhole. . . . Delicate, whimsical satire, elusive and delicious. An altogether different book. There will be those who will scorn it, and those who will laugh at it, and those who will be angry at it. But such people don't count, in the world of literature and beauty and humor."

About the Books

THE EDITOR

The Reverend Sir William Robertson Nicoll, D.D., LL.D., is a brilliant scholar and editor whose genius conceived this work and whose fertile mind arranged the schedule whereby each of the books of the Bible should have adequate exposition by a master mind especially trained for the task at hand.

This accomplished, there remained the equally important duty of absolute accuracy in text translation and quotation. This was possible only through the agency of a master-editor; hence this Authorized Edition of The Expositor's Bible represents the very acme of ripened scholarship, accurately prepared.

THE CONTRIBUTORS

A perusal of the appended list of authors will demonstrate the marvelous versatility and strength of the series; a closer inspection will reveal the sad fact of the passing of several of the great authors of the books in the series—but there remains their work. Because of the peculiarly appropriate time in Biblical scholarship when this work was undertaken it is extremely doubtful if ever again so uniformly strong a list of contributors could be secured under one editorship.

The Greatest Dog Story Ever Written

BEAUTIFUL JOE

By MARSHALL SAUNDERS

The life story of a dog as told by himself. "Beautiful Joe" was rescued and owned by the author's family. The entire charming story is based on fact.

THIS animal classic was first published in 1893, having taken the prize offered by the American Humane Society for the best treatment of wrongs to animals. More than 1,000,000 Copies have already been sold and "Beautiful Joe" still ranks among the world's best selling books. It is a story that will never die or grow old. The autobiography of "Beautiful Joe," the ugly dog, has had a powerful influence in the lives of millions of children, and will be read with delight by millions more in the years to come.

There is a human quality running through all its descriptions of animal life that makes it intensely interesting. There are practical directions and recipes for the care of household pets that make it most valuable. As an educational agent it is of great worth, teaching, unobtrusively, the lesson of unselfishness.

It Is Children's Book Week

THE records of activities at the headquarters of Children's Book Week, indicate that, in variety and extent, the achievement has far exceeded that of any previous year. Reports are coming in from different communities showing that there has been an admirable spirit of co-operation and a general understanding of the purposes of the Week with the opportunity that it gives for all those interested in the furtherance of children's reading to work whole-heartedly together. It is this aspect of the Week that gives it its real importance. Children's books should be read the year round and sold the year round, but, in order to make this possible, it is necessary to get the whole subject of children's reading before the public, in order that it will respond more effectively to year round efforts. This contact with the public is what Children's Book Week has accomplished.

In some directions, the increase in attention has been very remarkable. The magazines have carried articles of unusual value and constructiveness; the schools have been far more interested than usual, as their relation to the whole movement of general reading has become much clearer; and the moving picture people have added a dramatic touch by very widespread co-operation. Booksellers, libraries and publishers who have been most active from the start of the movement have certainly found plenty of co-operative interest this year.

The first observation of this event was the "Good Book Week" inaugurated in 1916 by Franklin K. Mathiews. In 1919, following Mr. Mathiews's address at the Boston Booksellers' Convention it became "Children Book Week" with increased funds, and the work was carried on by the Secretary of the Booksellers' Association with slight assistance. In the last three years since the details of the campaign have been developed under the auspices of the Publishers' Association, and the education work placed in the hands of Marion Humble, the interest has so broadened that the office has required four assistants during the last month in mailing and letter writing, and the echo of the work has carried on thru the year in the general book promotion campaign.

Books About Books

IF there are books that are not only intrinsically interesting but serve to interest the reader in other books, those volumes are of especial value in the bookstores, and a glance thru the pages of the fall announcements of this year indicate that there has never been a season when so much material of this type was coming from the press. One reader recently asked whether there was not some general agreement among publishers that each one should issue at least one or two books a year that should encourage the general interest in reading and in literature. The wide selection of items available this year might indicate that such a guess was not as hazardous as it sounds.

Many of the leading critics have collected volumes of essays, such as "Americans" by Stuart P. Sherman, "The Tocsin of Revolt" by Brander Matthews, both Scribner books, "The Critical Game" by John Macy (Bon & Liveright), "Sidelights on American Literature" by Fred Lewis Pattee (Century), "Appraisements and Asperities" by Felix E. Schelling (Lippincott). Well-known English essayists provide, "Some Modern Authors" by S. P. B. Mais (Dodd, Mead), "Books and Characters" by Lytton Strachey, "More Authors and I" by C. Lewis Hind (Dodd, Mead), and "Studies in Literature," Second Series by Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch (Putnam). Henry Van Dyke's volume from Scribner's, "Companionable Books," has a very friendly sound. Doubleday issues Maurice Egan's "Confessions of a Booklover," and from Knopf comes a reprint of one of the most stimulating books of recent literary history, Holbrook Jackson's "The Eighteen-Nineties." Book-trade reminiscence is not omitted, such as "Glimpses of Authors" by Caroline Ticknor (Houghton Mifflin), and in this group might also be included "Memories of A Hostess" by M. A. DeWolfe Howe (Atlantic Monthly Press), a delightful book on the famous wife of the famous Boston publisher, James T. Fields. One important volume is in verse and anonymous, "The Critical Fable" from Houghton

Mifflin Co.. In special fields are "Dante and His Influence" by Thomas Nelson Page (Scribner), seemingly the result of his Italian sojourn, "Preraphaelite and Other Poets" by Lafcadio Hearn (Dodd, Mead), "William Dean Howells" by Delmar Gross Cooke (Dutton), "Prophets of Today" (Carlyle, Browning, Arnold) by John Kelman (Harvard University Press) and "The Home Life of Swinburne" by Clara Watts-Dunton (Stokes). In "The Novel of Tomorrow," published by Bobbs-Merrill, there is a symposium of opinion by a dozen of our leading American writers. The technique of writing has not been overlooked, and from Doran comes a very welcome book on "The Business of Writing" by Robert Cortes Holliday and Alexander Van Rensselaer, from Bobbs-Merrill "Fundamentals of Fiction Writing" by Arthur Sullivan Hoffman, "The Writer's Art" by Rollo W. Brown (Harvard), and from the University of Chicago Press "The Technique of Thomas Hardy" by Joseph W. Beach, and from McBride "If You Don't Write Fiction" by Charles Phelps Cushing. The most notable and beautiful set of all is D. Berkeley Updike's "Printing Types: Their History, Forms and Use" (Harvard University Press), a set of books for every bookseller, publisher or collector and one of the masterpieces of American printing. That its reception has been worthy of the book is shown by the fact that within a month of publication three-fourths of the edition has been taken.

Expenditures for Amusements

THE Government's figures on the American expenditure for amusements, based on tax returns, indicate that the total amusement receipts fell off $160,000,000. Half of this decrease is on motion picture receipts, and it is indicative of the vast proportions of this industry that it could sustain a loss that is perhaps double the entire trade-book business of the country and still be in healthy shape. The public may have become a little more captious as to the quality of its entertainment, but it is still taking its amusements liberally, and the decrease of $1.50 per capita does not show that hard times have affected expenditures very considerably.

An extremely interesting sidelight on what working people spend their money for is shown in some figures gathered from the Bureau of Labor Statistics and published in the monthly Labor Review. In an examination of the budgets of 12,096 families in 92 different cities collected three years ago, the analysis shows that 5.9% bought pianos or piano players; 15.4% of the families bought either automobiles, motorcycles or bicycles at an average cost of $105, which indicates that the bicycles must have been in the majority and walking is still practiced by the workers; 95.7 per cent of the families bought newspapers at an average expense of $8.17 per year; 46.5 per cent bought magazines; while 15.4 per cent purchased books.

The New Book Review

ON December 1st, Funk & Wagnalls Company begins the publication of the International Book Review, a monthly magazine devoted entirely to book interest which starts, according to the company's statement, with a circulation of more than 70,000. Dr. Clifford Smythe, for many years editor of the Times Book Review Supplement, has become editor of the new periodical.

The Literary Digest will now eliminate from its pages the departments which have been devoted exclusively to books, but in one issue of each month will carry a digest of the important books as reviewed in the International Book Review, thus bringing the new periodical to the attention of the million and more readers of the weekly.

The publishers intend to associate the periodical directly with bookstore distribution of books, and no display advertising of mail-order books or coupon business will be accepted unless these books are also sold thru the bookstore. Booksellers will receive a complimentary copy of the first issue.

The name of the periodical emphasizes an effort to have it contain items of more than American interest, and the pages will attempt to cover the aspirations and ideals of all countries. It is the aim of the editors to extend the limits of its influence beyond that of a purely literary magazine and to reach a new circle of readers.

The magazine will have the same page size as the Digest and will contain about ninety-six pages. The price will be 15 cents a copy, annual subscription, $1.50, or to subscribers of the Literary Digest, $1. The advertising rates are $480 a page per single insertion with a minimum display space of one inch at $9.52 to $11.20 per inch, according to the number of insertions.

How Children's Books Helped One Book Store

By Lawrence V. Harvey

Dives, Pomeroy & Stewart, Harrisburg

THE question has been asked, "How does Children's Book Week help the book store?" The answer is, "It will help very little unless the bookseller is willing to take advantage of the opportunity presented and bring forcibly to the attention of his community the need of better books for boys and girls."

When the first Children's Book Week was launched, we are frank to admit that we were skeptical of the results that might be obtained. "Why, children's books will always sell at Christmas and do not need any special attention." That had been our attitude up to that time. Outside of the holiday season we only carried the popular series and these slightly represented. For the holiday trade we bought largely and, as we now see, indifferently of so-called juveniles. We decided, however, to get back of the movement and ordered a different stock of the better books, as shown in the Bookshelf for Boys and Girls, to augment the lines already purchased. We always bought a few of the better books. About one each of the Scribner Series of "King Arthur," etc., by Pyle, about two each of "Tom Sawyer" and "Huck Finn," two each of Jacobs "Washington Square Classics," perhaps ten of "The Twins" series by Lucy Fitch Perkins and a scattering of others. A sale of a book at two or three dollars for a child was an event talked about. We always had at least one thousand "Alger Books," five hundred "Henty," one thousand "Southworth and Sheldon" and hundreds of "Motor Boys," "Frank Merriwell" and similar series.

For this first effort we displayed our books earlier than usual, had as many of the ministers of the city as would, call attention to the value of more careful selection of books for boys and girls and placed the Book Week posters thruout our store and the city in strategic points. From a viewpoint of sales the week was no better than the one preceding. When Christmas was over, however, we found that all of our better books had sold along with the "trash."

The next year we bought more of the better books and less of the inferior ones and carried a larger stock of children's books thru the year than ever before. Five years ago sales in children's books from January first to December first did not run over eight hundred dollars. Today we carry a stock of approximately four thousand dollars in children's books alone. We are proud of the juvenile section and give it more than one-third of the entire floor space devoted to books. You will find a very complete line, including perhaps fifteen different editions of "Mother Goose" ranging in price from 50c. to $3.00 and hundreds of the other old friends that have been loved by boys and girls, who are now grown up and buying for little boys and girls.

To show the effect of our efforts to stimulate buying of better books for boys and girls, we will quote a few figures. This year we have bought over two thousand "Bed Time Stories" by Burgess, Cory and others, one hundred "Washington Square Classics"; one hundred "Windermere Series"; fifty Lippincott's "Stories all Children Love" series, fifty Harper's "Louis Rhead" books and gift editions of "Heidi"; "Hans Brinker," "Tale of Two Cities," "Robin Hood," "East of the Sun and West of the Moon," Moby Dick, and "Little Women," in lots of five to twenty-five, and in lots of one to five of many other titles that bear the A. L. A. approval. We have a children's play room where the little chaps can have a good time and get acquainted with "Peter Rabbit," "The Cat and the Fiddle," "Humpty Dumpty" and one of the "Three Blind Mice." These are papier mâché figures about four feet tall and do a lot to help make "Mother Goose" real.

Our success has been gained thru the aid of various plans of selling and rendering service. Our "Juvenile" girl would go to the public library two afternoons a week to obtain information about the best books for children, and instructions as to authors and illustrations. This help was graciously given by the public library. During all book weeks the children's librarian of the public library arranges a table of books from our stock, which bears a card of library indorsement. Last year we had a trained librarian thruout Book Week and up to Christmas Eve, whose sole duty was to advise and help our customers in their selection of children's books. Last year we offered prizes of ten dollars, five dollars and two and a half dollars in books, to the winners, for the best story submitted, using the titles of books found in our juvenile section. It was so successful that we intend to repeat this year.

The boys and girls of today are the men and women of tomorrow and the best cannot be too good. Fathers and mothers are beginning to realize that a book bought at Christmas will not last a whole year and also that the better the book the better the child. There is not a bit of doubt in our mind as to the success of Children's Book Week and this year will see a bigger and better effort to drive home to the people of our community the need for better BOOKS IN THE HOME.

Interesting School Contest

AMONG the instances of constructive Children's Book Week promotion is a circular letter which was sent out to schools by Russell & Cockrell of Amarillo, Texas. This bulletin called the teachers' attention to the fact that they were offering sixteen prizes for story essays by students in connection with Children's Book Week and suggested that the teachers read the offer in detail to the students, as a means of introducing helpful book discussion into the schools. They offered to answer questions on any subject and to co-operate in any other way. The problem set followed the idea used by The Bookman.

"Who are the twelve characters from books you have read whom you would invite to your house to a party? Why would you invite them? What would you expect they would do if they came?"

A prize of $5 in books, a second prize of $4, and 14 other books for other contestants. Judges: Mrs. Lois W. Henderson, County Librarian, and Paul T. Vickers of the Daily News. Age and school grades to be taken into consideration. Characters may be selected from stories or history, but the names of the books from which they are selected should be mentioned. Three hundred to five hundred word stories are best.

Employees Urged to Use Library

THE Joseph Horne Company of Pittsburgh urges its employees to avail themselves of the opportunities of the Carnegie Library, the Retail Ledger reports. The Educational Department of the store appreciates that knowledge of goods, knowledge of current business conditions, knowledge of anything that employees can assimilate makes them more efficient salespeople. Such knowledge is more important in the retail book business and intelligent understanding and appreciation of the stock is a necessity.

Reviewing Children's Classics

WHEN a publisher prepares a new and handsome edition of some book that has an already well established place, the notice in literary papers usually takes the form of a comment on its make-up, its new illustrator or contains reference to the past history of the book.

Another method of approach is suggested by a long review in the Baltimore Evening Sun of "Little Women." The review with well maintained seriousness approaches the book exactly as if it were a new story to be considered in comparison with other new girls' books coming from the publishers' shelves. When this approach is well sustained which is perhaps difficult to do, it does give a new slant to the appreciation of the book and a new insight into the reasons for continued popularity and influence and makes possible a comparison with present day books.

As the review starts, "In these days of highly colored 'action' stories and sex-flavored best sellers, it is a rare pleasure to discover an authoress who has not got out of touch with the essential simplicity of life and language and all the complexes that have subverted the points of view of contemporary novelists. The untaught tenderness, the simple virtues, the quiet peace of the book infuse us anew with the hope that, after all, the world may achieve in time that consummate state of democratic and self-effacing felicity described in the more fragrant passages of 'Little Women.' The plot, what there is of it, is quite simple. The mother is—well she is the ideal mother. Everyone will recognize her, for she has been imprinted upon and interpreted to the hearts of the immense movie theatre-going public by William Fox. Both parents never err. How could they, with such daughters? Despite the fact that Jo's father was a chaplain in the 'war,' Jo is permitted to marry the man of her choice, who is—compose yourself, gentle reader—a German! She goes so far as to remark, 'I wish Americans were as simple and natural as Germans.' From her convenient post in an eddy in the stream of life, Miss Alcott has escaped the tumbled waters of controversy, ism, sect, sex and reform and has wrought a fabric of ideal loveliness."

Little Talks With the Sales Force

By James Lackington, Jr.

II.

"I HAVE a few items in my note-book" said Mr. Brown, as the staff gathered around him for the twenty minute discussion which was held each Thursday evening after closing, "but before we take them up, if we do at all tonight, I want to ask whether any of you has any points you would like to mention, any suggestion that is for the good of the service, so to speak, any question you would like to ask?"

He looked around expectantly. For a moment no one spoke. The members of the staff have a whole lot of valuable suggestions to make; they have many perplexing questions to ask; but it is not always easy to induce them to open their minds. These informal talks had done much to make this easier for Mr. Brown's associates, but even now Miss Temple hesitated to mention what she was thinking about and which she had earlier in the day decided to bring up at the meeting. Mr. Brown saw that she was making an effort to speak so he came to her assistance.

"Come, Miss Temple," he said: "I can see with half an eye that you have something interesting to tell us, something we ought to know. Let's have it."

She began hesitatingly.

"You see it sounds as tho I were criticizing and that isn't what I have in mind at all. I just think that sometimes we who are on the floor all the time get just a little different view of things from anyone else."

"Of course you do" Mr. Brown agreed heartily, "I concede that immediately. No chance for a discussion there."

"Well," Miss Temple went on, warming to her subject, "a man came into the store yesterday and he said, 'I want to get a copy of that book you advertised in the Gazette.' Now, I didn't know that we had advertised any book in the Gazette. I asked Miss Freeman and Miss Lister and Mr. Gordon who were in the department at the time. You were at lunch. Well, no one knew anything about the advertisement in the Gazette."

"What did you do?" asked Mr. Brown.

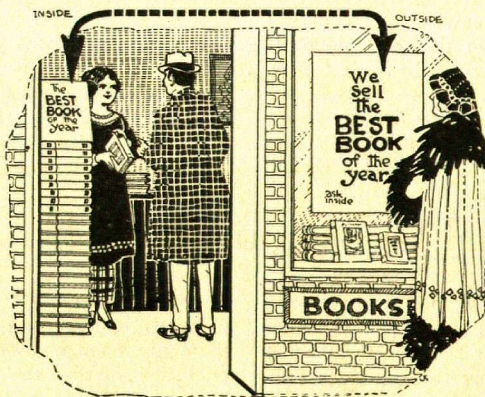

"Do? I didn't let him get away. I finally telephoned the Gazette. Just imagine calling up a newspaper office to ask them to tell you what book you advertised. It took them ten minutes to find out, but Mr. Customer was very patient and he bought the book. It was Mr. Farnol's latest novel. As the customer took the package he observed, you and the advertising department ought to get together, and I think he was right, don't you, Mr. Brown?"

"Why, of course, I do. Miss Temple, I knew you had something interesting and valuable to tell us. As a matter of fact, I do try to keep you informed as to the advertising copy we send out, but that one slipped me somehow. It all comes from doing something in a hurry. The Gazette man was at my elbow while I dashed off that copy. I can see that we can systematize to advantage in regard to advertising. This I do want you all to feel. Such a matter as Miss Temple mentions was entirely unintentional. I believe in complete co-operation with the staff, and you can't have co-operation without understanding. Mr. Partland has the same idea on the subject." Mr. Partland was the "big boss."

"I have an idea about advertising", Mr. Gordon put in. "It isn't anything new or original, but it is something that is so easily overlooked. I know we fail to carry it out very often and yet we can all see its benefits. I think that advertising can only about half sell a book. Other things do the other half. It seems to me that when we advertise a book we ought to make a good window display of it and put a few copies in a prominent place in the store. Then when a customer sees the book in the window, or on the table he recollects that he has seen it advertised and he realizes that it is a prominent book."

EAGER RESPONSE TO A WELL ORGANIZED ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN

"Besides" remarked Miss Porter, who seldom voiced her opinion, "the very fact that it is advertised and that it is displayed prominently gives us—the selling force—the idea that the book amounts to something, and we carry the same impression of the book's importance on to the customer."

"Do you think it pays to advertise a particular book?" began Gordon, but Mr. Brown quickly interrupted him.

"That's too big a topic to start on just now," he said. "But we'll discuss it thoroly at another meeting. The thing that has been brought out tonight, and very well brought out, is that the sales-force and the advertising department in any institution ought to work in the closest harmony. If they fail to do so, I doubt if the best sort of advertising can be made to pay. As Gordon so well put it, advertising at best is only half the battle; the rest lies in proper display and energetic selling effort. My idea of it is that we ought to decide that a certain book is worth selling and then put all of these efforts behind it. I want us to be a well-organized harmonious working unit, so that when we decide a book ought to sell we are equal to the job of putting it over. I want you folks to tell me about books you think deserve to sell and why you think so. Then we can get the whole organization back of these books and show what we can do. Regarding the advertising, I will see that proofs of coming advertisements are shown to everyone, and it will be up to Mr. Gordon to put into effect his own idea of co-operating by having window and store displays at the time the advertising appears. I am mighty glad Miss Temple brought this subject up and I hope that everyone of you will keep your eyes and ears open for anything that is for the benefit of our mutual work and when you do have such ideas or suggestions, don't be timid about bringing them up for discussion.

"I think that will be all this time. Goodnight."

National Consciousness Thru Books

THE Canadian Bookman, October 1922 issue, contains an editorial apropos of Canadian Book Week, October 28th to November 4.

"It appears unlikely that the Canadian publishers as a body will take any special action in regard to it; but those individual firms which in past years have shown their appreciation of the claims of Canadian literature may safely be relied upon to give the movement an energetic support. A large amount of preliminary propaganda work has already been done by the Canadian Authors' Association, especially with a view of bringing the subject before Canadian Rotary, Kiwanis and other clubs and similar bodies by means of public addresses."

The editorial goes on to point out "that it is not a campaign for inducing Canadians to read Canadian books irrespective of their merits," but an attempt "to induce Canadians to include a larger number of Canadian books among the books which they do actually read—and perhaps to increase the total amount of their reading. But this is because we are convinced that the percentage of Canadian books among the total reading of Canadian readers is much lower than it should be, having regard to the merits of the Canadian article and to the needs of Canadians for a clearer and broader knowledge of their own country."

The writer of the editorial estimates the Canadian books sold in Canadian bookstores to count for less than one per cent of the total sales. There is no attempt being made to induce Canadians to devote fifty—or even twenty—per cent of their reading time to Canadian authors, but the writer feels that the present proportion is obviously wrong and that there are enough good Canadian books being published so that the percentage of Canadian books sold could be safely raised from one per cent to three or four per cent without endangering the quality of the Canadian's taste in books.

There is in the same issue of the Canadian Bookman an article by Hugh S. Fayrs, President of the Macmillan Co., and Secretary of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Authors' Association. In an address delivered at a banquet of the Associated Canadian Clubs, Mr. Fayrs said, "We are coming to find that there is such a thing as a Canadian national consciousness, just as much as an English, or Irish. The Authors' Association is one of the bodies which is trying to give expression to this consciousness."

"Books held a more or less negligible place in our lives until a few years ago. But now people are beginning to buy books. Perhaps the war was responsible for it. It is only recently that books ceased to have an insignificant place in our lives."

"There are four intermediaries in the author-reader transfer. There are the writer, the publisher, the bookseller and the public. Co-operation between the first of these, recently evident, is a welcome sign."

"Only a few years ago it was a fact that there were no Canadian Books. Listen to these figures of Canadian books published, as revealed by Canadian Authors' Week: in 1917, 26 books; 1918, 43; 1919, 70; 1920, 200; while in 1921 just 400 Canadian written books were published. Canadian publishers need no longer fear that to handle a Canadian book is to take a chance.

"The people who are developing this branch of Canadian life are undertaking a work quite as praiseworthy as that of our manufacturing and commercial kings. They are endeavoring to see whether there is a demand among Canadians for Canadian books, and the answer is in the affirmative.

"The signs, sounds, and symbols of Canada must be created by those who were born and reared here, or, at least, reached this country while their minds were still plastic.

"We are a polyglot people. Our constitution is heterogeneous, but quite different from that of other countries. It is for this reason that our books must come from within."

How American Firms Can Reach the Market of Great Britain

The American Chamber of Commerce of London has prepared this Analysis of the Conditions Facing the American Exporter of Merchandise to Great Britain and the Information will be Valuable to American Publishers as well as to other Manufacturers

THE great difficulty in writing such an article as is desired on this subject is in reality to make clear how simple it is for American manufacturers to come into the British market. Literally all they have to do is to come and bring their goods and sell them; for in no country of the world is it easier for a foreigner to trade than in Great Britain.

The apparently widespread idea among American traders, that if they make any English profits these will all be swallowed up by the State in taxation, is difficult to account for. It is true that British taxation today is heavy and constitutes a drain upon commerce; but this state of things is, in one form or other, prevalent in all other countries. The Excess Profits Duty is dead. The income tax is assessable only upon net profits, and is the same for a new American trader as for an old British firm.

But one thing ought to be understood at the outset. It is right and fair that if an American manufacturer comes and makes profits in the British market he would naturally expect to pay the standard rate of British taxation on those profits. If he wants to make profits out of people in Great Britain, and yet pay nothing for the privilege, he is like a man who wants to travel on a railroad, but doesn't want to pay for a ticket. This article is not for him.

What the Taxation Is

It should be made perfectly clear at the outset that British taxation only applies to profits, and, moreover, only applies to profits made in connection with British sales. If an American house makes £100,000 a year profit in America and only £10,000 a year in respect to its British trade, then British taxation only applies to the £10,000. If no profits at all are made, then of course no taxation is incurred. The taxation is at a flat or uniform rate, which at present stands at 5s. in the pound. The tax is only upon net profits, and all fair and proper trade expenses are, of course, deducted from gross profits before the amount of net profits is arrived at.

A certain type of American trader has sought to escape taxation by inflating the price at which the goods are invoiced into Great Britain, and thus unfairly diminishing the British profits and increasing the manufacturing profits made in America. Without commenting on the moral aspects of this, it may be said that the practice has been worn threadbare, that the British revenue officials are on the alert for it, and that it is likely to bring more trouble than profit to any firm attempting to resort to it.

On Whom Taxation Falls

British law recognises the clearest distinction between trading in a country and trading with a country. If you trade with Britain you do not pay taxes. If you trade in Britain you do.

It is on this point that a good deal of difficulty and misconception exists. But the following explanation should make the distinction clear.

If an American house frankly and undisguisedly sets up a branch business in Great Britain, the branch business is taxed just like the English business carried on next door.

If an American house sells its goods to some one in Britain who buys them and pays for them and runs all the business risks connected with them and with their resale, then the American house pays no taxation.

It is in reference to cases lying between these two extremes that a little explanation is necessary.

The true criterion is whether sales are made in Britain for the account of the American house. Thus where an agent in Great Britain receives consignments on commission (whether from the American manufacturer direct or from an American export house does not matter) and renders accounts to America, deducting his commission, the American house is liable to taxation because it is the real seller (altho thru an agent) of the goods in Great Britain.

Moreover, if an agent in Great Britain refers orders to America for authority to accept, and the orders are then accepted by the agent in Great Britain, the American house is liable to taxation because (as in the previous case) it is the real seller of the goods in Great Britain.

But if a person here in Great Britain bona fide buys the goods from America and consequently handles them for his own account and at his own risk, the American house is not liable to taxation, for the true seller in Great Britain is the person who has bought them from America and is thus their true owner.

Moreover, if an agent in Great Britain canvasses for orders and transmits them to America, leaving the American house to decide whether it will or will not supply the goods, and the American house despatches the goods direct to the customer and receives payment direct, then the American house is not liable to taxation because the sale was not effected in Great Britain. It may be that if occasional payments were received by the agent in Great Britain and the money transmitted by him to America, there would still be no liability to taxation on the part of the American house, but this begins to get near the danger line and is best avoided.

Amount of Taxation

From the foregoing it will be clear that so far as liability to taxation is concerned, it is perfectly immaterial what form the American organization takes in Great Britain—the liability to taxation and rate of taxation on the net profits are just the same. The American house that makes £5 profit on a small consignment on commission is in these respects in precisely the same position as an American house with forty proclaimed branches established in Great Britain.

How to Get British Business

Now, if the troublesome question of taxation be eliminated, the only question that seems to remain is as to what policy and organization is best for purely commercial purposes.

This question is either too difficult to be answered at all, or it is so simple that it answers itself—one hardly knows which. For the answer depends really, and depends only, on the magnitude of the business involved, and the amount of money that the American house is prepared to put into it. There is no magic in any particular form of constitution. The garment must depend upon the nature and quantity of the available cloth.

Primarily a Question of Policy

Americans buying or selling in Great Britain will fall under one or other of the following:

A. Direct Representation.

1. A branch house, either incorporated or not incorporated.

2. Direct salesman, carrying no stock and selling only from samples or catalogs.

B. Indirect Representation.

1. Sales agent. (Exclusive, with or without stock or non-exclusive, with or without stock.)

2. Export commission house in America or import commission house in Great Britain.

Every new market demands cultivation before it will yield fruit. This means money, time, and organization. If a large American house dealing in an article which, upon investigation, proved to be adapted to British requirements, were determined to extend its operations to Great Britain, and to back up the enterprise with the necessary premises and capital and staff, it would obviously be appropriate that the business should be established in the boldest possible way, either in the form of a branch of the American company, or even by the formation of a separate English company.

At the other extreme, if an American manufacturer were interested to know whether a particular article of his would "catch on" in the British market but did not want to commit himself at all seriously at the outset, his obvious course would be to send in a small consignment on commission, and see what happened, before he went much further. If the results were satisfactory he would distribute the goods more widely among agents in Great Britain, or would even go to the length of fixing up an exclusive agency with some particular British house on special terms.

But every care and precaution should be exercised to place such preliminary consignments with agents qualified and equipped to carry out the test efficiently. Goods left to themselves will not find a market. Unless definite arrangements are entered into to assure the goods being properly placed before potential final buyers nothing will be gained by sending the goods into the market.

So far as the first practical steps are concerned, not only the American Chamber of Commerce in London, but many other sources of commercial information and assistance are open to American firms who are really interested in the question.

PLAYS: A RETRIEVED REFORMATION was dramatized by Paul Armstrong under the name, "Alias Jimmy Valentine," and was a stage success. This and several other stories by O. Henry have been the basis of motion pictures. A DOUBLE DYED DECEIVER was made into a play by Prof. Donald Stuart for Norman Hackett, and ROADS OF DESTINY was the basis of a play by Channing Pollock, produced by Al. Woods.

Good Book-Making

WHILE the use of materials other than cloth for book binding as an economy disappeared many months ago, the use of paper with cloth as a method of getting artistic binding effects seems, from an examination of the fall output, on the increase. Some of these examples are in the accepted and conservative field on contrast between cloth back and plain paper sides; some other effects are more experimental. Altho the price of book cloths has recently increased, bringing it to over twice the pre-war cost, this still does not make economy the reason for cloth and board binding, as the handling of the two types of material cannot be as rapid as of one type. It is largely on the ground of effective artistic results that this type of design is used.

A good example is a volume from the Atlantic Monthly Press entitled "Meade's Headquarters." This broad page octavo has a dark blue back with gray board sides and an attractive label of the same color; another is Lippincott's edition of Felix Schelling's "Appraisements and Asperities." In this case there is a label on the side as well as on the back and there is a pleasant contrast between two colors. The text is as attractive as the covers.

A rather more startling contrast of two plain colors is shown in Doubleday's edition of Franklin P. Adam's "Overset," a narrow 12mo with orange boards and hand-lettered design in black stamped on the side cover, a format suited to the text.

In Putnam's issue of Herbert S. Gorham's poems, "The Barcarole of James Smith," the gray paper of the sides has been repeated on the back itself but with cloth hinges of a dark blue shade. In this case the title on both back and side has been stamped in gilt.

Another very attractive color combination is that which appears on a Macmillan book entitled "The Word of God" by Monsigneur Francis Borgongini-Duca. The board is dark maroon with full gilt stamping, and a white paper label is used on the black cloth back.

A still different method of handling the board sides is shown in Doubleday's attractive printing of Richard LeGallienne's "Jongleur Strayed." In this case the label is set into the board covers after blind stamping.

The most striking example of color experimentation in the month's production is of English origin. Harold Monro's "Real Property," imported by Macmillan and printed at the Arden Press, London. The board cover is strikingly designed in broad green, black and white lines with black lettering lengthwise on the back and the hand-lettering of the title on the side, all in one piece of lithography. The effect is attention compelling.

The Doran Company has used a similar board method in planning the cover of Milton Raison's poems, "Spindrift," the lettering and design in black, green and silver being all of one printing with the still further experiment of having the binding repeated on a sliding jacket of identical design and of paper thinness which protects the book until it reaches the owner.

Brentano's have given delightful format to C. E. Montague's "Disenchantment" and have used a striking red checker-board paper for the side with this color repeated on the top. A. A. Knopf, Inc., has for a long time been a successful experimenter in the field of board covers, and among its interesting volumes this month are Rose O'Neill's "Master Mistress" with its striking purple sides, and the color note repeated on the label and on the staining of the top. For Floyd Dell's volume of plays, "King Arthur's Socks," there is another attractive paper with the note of red repeated on the label and the note of green repeated on the stained top. For Hugh Wiley's "Lily" there has been selected a sharp black and red contrast with red top.

With the chances that boards give in allowing the publishers to make new types of effective covers, there is the disadvantage of such substitutions for cloth in case the book gets put to the hard and continuous use of public circulating libraries. In this case the board is not a full substitute for the cloth, the need for rebinding comes too soon. In most cases, the combination has been selected for books in the field of belles-lettres which do not have as hard circulation as do the volumes in some other fields.

Among the interesting letters that the Children's Book Week Committee received, commenting on children's reading was one from Floyd Dell, in which one suggestion was that the publishers would do well to take adult books and make them suitable for an audience of young people simply by putting them into larger type and supplying adequate illustration. Just such attempts have been appearing in this fall's publications, one of the most beautiful volumes being Melville's "Moby Dick," which Dodd, Mead has published with illustrations by Mead Schaeffer, a beautiful broad page volume with striking illustrations, one of which is repeated on the cover. One of the most effective pictures is the end paper showing the harbor of New Bedford and the giant harpoonist and the boy proceeding to the boat. In the same field and equally successful is the "White Company" of Conan Doyle with its pictures by Wyeth, published by Cosmopolitan. This, too, was published as an adult book and will be attractive to both adults and young people in the new form.

The Lippincott Company is strikingly successful in its books on furniture and decoration as it has been, also, in its series of books on American travel. A new volume is E. S. Holloway's "Practical Book of Furnishing the Small House and Apartment." It is illustrated in color and black and white, and the typographical planning is admirable.

A fine octavo in the field of memoirs is Caroline Ticknor's "Glimpses of Authors," Houghton Mifflin. The full gilt binding seems to belong to other days and to be almost uniform in effect with the well-known edition of Mrs. Field's "Yesterdays of Authors."

To find Esther Singleton's name on the title of a gift book takes the bookseller back to those years when her volumes of travel and art were appearing every season. The Century Company has made a very attractive volume of "Shakespeare Garden." The Century Company is also responsible for Donn Byrne's "The Wind Bloweth," which has fortunately been supplied with reproductions of the striking illustrations by George Bellows which appeared in the magazine in a series that will be looked back upon as one of the best examples of good book-making of this period.

Grant Showerman's "Horace and His Influence" has been added to the Marshall Jones series on Our Debt to Greece and Rome, a small 12mo book printed and bound at the Plimpton Press, a book of real dignity and of the best manufacture both as to paper and binding.

The University of Chicago has planned and printed at its own press "The Technique of Thomas Hardy" by Beach, an attractive 12mo beautifully laid out for the subject.

A rather revolutionary book in the field of publishing, because it has resolutely attempted to adapt the characteristics of an illustrated magazine to book-making and teaching is "We and Our Government" by Jeremiah W. Jenks and Rufus Daniel Smith, the first of a series of textbooks planned by the American Viewpoint Society, which is a department of Boni & Liveright. The pages are of a magazine size with more space allowed to the pictures than to the text, which runs as a single column in the inside edge. There are hundreds of photographs, about three to the page, running continuously along with the text, and illustrating and amplifying each point made. Besides the photographs, there are twelve full-page drawings by Hanson Booth. As an experiment in helping the eye draw more from the book than can be taken in thru type, this book may be an important venture the effect of which should be watched.

A Book for Print Collectors

"THE HEADLESS HORSEMAN" by George S. Layard offers a treat to the lover of prints and the collector. It tells the mysterious and fascinating story of what is probably the most widely discussed copper-plate engraving in the world—Pierre Lombard's Headless Horseman. Mr. Layard's book has been published by Stokes.

Miss Lowell's Poetry Bookshelf

THREE year ago, the Doubleday bookstores did a very interesting and effective piece of publicity for their stores and one that resulted in a great many sales. They asked Amy Lowell to make for them a bookshelf of modern poets. The compilation aroused much interest and controversy, and copies were very widely called for. They have asked her to make a revision of this, which is now ready. The changes are not fundamental, but they show new names and some new selections from those previously included.

Miss Millay is perhaps the most important figure that has gained a wide hearing during this time, and Mr. Gibson is the most important poet that has been dropped. Eleanor Wylie and Alfred Kreyenborg are also important additions who did not appear at all in the other list. It is interesting to see Adelaide Crapsey in the collection, and other new names added to the list are Alice Corbin Henderson, Robert Graves, Eunice Tietjens, Hervey Allen and Hilda Conkling. Among other names that disappeared are James Oppenheim, William Aspinwall Bradley, William Wattles, Margaret Widdemer and Dora Siegerson. Miss Lowell represents her own works by "Men, Women and Ghosts," "Pictures of the Floating World" and "Legends." The list includes sixty-four titles, which might be considered as a representative collection of modern poetry and includes "The New Poetry" compiled by Monroe and Henderson and three collected volumes, those of Robinson, Masefield and Fletcher.

In the second biennial volume of "American Poetry—A Miscellany," published by Harcourt, Brace & Company, we learn, Sara Teasdale had her first volume in 1907; James Oppenheim in 1909; Louis Untermeyer in 1911; Amy Lowell and Vachel Lindsay in 1912; John Gould Fletcher, whose list is the longest of all, in 1913; Conrad Aiken and Robert Frost in 1914; Carl Sandburg, Alfred Kreyenborg and Hilda Doolittle in 1916; Edna St. Vincent Millay in 1917; Jean Starr Untermeyer in 1918. Two poets, Fletcher and Frost, first appeared with English imprint, and five volumes of Fletcher are with English imprint only.

The Book Exhibit at the Arts Club

THE seventeenth annual exhibit at the National Arts Club, Gramercy Park, New York, opened on November 1st for a month's duration.

The showing of books is arranged by asking each publisher to select from his output the books that he feels best represent his list, the number of titles being allotted by the committee according to the general amount of the publisher's activity.

Instead of having the books on tables, as has been the custom during the past years, parallel rails, four deep, have been run around the entire gallery, and the books are set sideways on these rails with a strong light thrown on them as if on a picture. The volumes are grouped by subject and not by publisher.

Besides the new books, there is an exhibit of a home library consisting of 200 volumes from a list prepared specially and approved by the Club committee, the books being supplied by the courtesy of the National Association of Book Publishers. There is also a Thomas Bailey Aldrich bookcase on display, in which have been placed the twenty-five books for a schoolroom library that were selected last summer by a vote of the American Library Association and National Education Association.

Every Wednesday evening of the month will be an Authors' Night. The first one opened auspiciously with short talks by Harry Kemp, author of "Tramping on Life," Vilhjalmur Stefansson, author of "Northward Course of Empire," Frederick S. Dellenbaugh, author of "The Romance of the Colorado River," Ernest Peixotto author of "Through Spain and Portugal," and Gaylord Johnson, author of "The Sky Movies."

$25.00 PRIZE AWARD

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY prize for the best list of 200 titles for a home library has been awarded to Lloyd W. Josselyn, Librarian of the Public Library, Birmingham, Alabama. The collection was exhibited in the window of the Studio Bookstore, Birmingham. The list covered thoroughly all the varied interests of the average family and gave a good representation to modern literature as well as to the standard reference books, classics, poetry, essay and fiction, and had representation of the useful arts, science and travel. The display of such a collection connects books in people's minds with their homes and home reading, and thus takes them out of the purely academic field of discussion and opinion. The list of books with a photograph of the exhibit will be printed in the first issue in January, when home libraries are much more the subject of discussion and interest than during the Christmas season.

AN ATTRACTIVE CORNER OF THE OLD MARKET SQUARE BOOKSHOP OF PROVIDENCE WHICH OPENED IN OCTOBER

New Providence Bookshop

ONE of the most interestingly planned bookshops of recent months is The Old Market Square Bookshop of Providence, which opened in October. The rooms are a half flight up from the sidewalk with fine large windows toward the old Square and a few steps from the River. The rooms had been used for banking purposes and are handsomely finished. On one side is a beautiful fireplace with a clock, and opening to the rear is the director's room, which, for the time being, at least, has been turned into a stock-room and shipping room. The white cases have been very carefully planned, as is shown in the accompanying illustration, and the Windsor chairs add a touch of comfort. The flowers in the photograph indicate that on opening day, there were friendly greetings from the other bookshops of the town. The tables were later filled with books, the stock not all having arrived at the time the photograph was taken. The circulating library is one feature of the business, and special attention is being paid to children's books. The managers of the business are Miss Elisabeth Lustig, Mrs. Charles Bradley and Miss Sherwood.

Another Successful Woman Bookseller

LOUISE E. BONNEY opened last spring her Lantern Book Shop at Lake Placid. The shop was so successful that she is now starting one at Lake Saranac for the winter season. If the new shop is successful it will continue thruout the summer. The new shop certainly should be very profitable judging by the interest it is creating at Lake Saranac and the opening that is being planned. Jonas Lie is planning the interior and "even mixing paint for us." At the opening there will be "several real celebrities."

The Christian Science Monitor described the Lantern Book Shop in one of its early summer issues:

"The unusual thing about this building was the next room which I discovered in a room not twelve feet square lined with shelves and cozily equipped with two wicker chairs, with chintz cushions, a window box and a Persian cat. In this small space was a book shop, a bona fide book shop; not a mere conglomeration of current fiction and best sellers. There were volumes of essays, poetry and travel, belles lettres, a few good novels, and a discriminatingly selected pile of engravings and etch-ings. It was like finding oneself in a choice private library where every volume had been read with interest and was cherished with affection.

"Twelve by twelve, and in it, jostling one another in all the charming intimacy of bookshelves, the fancies, the wit, the meditations, the humor, and the reveries of finely tempered literary writers! It does good business, I am told, this scrap of a place with two chairs, a window box and a Persian cat, and a few hundred volumes. May it scatter its seed and see its offspring."

Questionable Books in Libraries

LOUIS N. FEIPEL, Editor of Publications, Brooklyn Public Library, recently sent a questionnaire on the subject of questionable books to thirty-one public librarians and six State library commissions. An article in the Library Journal, October issue, tells of the general attitude of librarians toward this matter.

The terms "objectionable book," as used in the questionnaire, was understood to cover "suggestive" fiction of the type of which many examples from authors of repute are but too well known, books honestly or otherwise offering physiological information, the classics which are usually grouped in book-catalogs under the heads of Erotica, Facetiae, or "Curious," including unexpurgated editions of such works as the "Arabian Nights."

As a whole, librarians seem to feel that they are primarily concerned in satisfying the book needs of the public and not in acting as special censors. However, they also are of the opinion, that as the resources of most libraries are limited, that the money spent for books should, for the most part, be used to purchase books of undisputed worth. Many librarians point out that a large majority of the books regarded as "questionable" are merely so because these books are not suitable for the average reader and would not normally be read by the average, because of difficulties of style, attenuated plots and psychological actions and reactions, were it not that the general public's attention is directed toward them by the newspapers publicity given to censorship discussions. The vital consideration is, of course, whether or not such books maybe possess real literary merit. If the book undoubtedly has great literary merit then the "questionable" consideration may be wholly or partially ignored—such classics as the "Decameron" and "The Arabian Nights" belong to this class, of course—but the difficulty of deciding the true worth of much modern fiction is great. The Chicago Public Library states its position thus "And so this library quietly examines and weighs all modern novels from the single standard of literary value, adding those which are found worthy, according to the standards of the time, and having regard as well for all the numerous class of readers whom it professes to serve."

Most librarians find that the best method to follow is to purchase when possible, all books of recognised worth and, if they are liable to misuse, to restrict their use to persons of maturity and discretion.

"Gargoyles" Under Suspicion

THE Watch and Ward Society of Boston, which corresponds to the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, has sent word to Boston booksellers that it has assurance that the sale of "Gargoyles" by Ben Hecht would be considered a violation of the Massachusetts statutes. It has been the custom of this Society to send such word around, so that a retailer could choose whether he would run the risk of being the person brought to court or withdraw the book as far as his store was concerned. This same kind of informal notice served to withdraw "Simon Called Peter" from the stores in Boston. In this latter instance, however, one case was brought to court, that of the owner of a subscription library in a Boston suburb.

Foreign Book Dealers

IN the issue of September 9th, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY printed a list of dealers in foreign books which had been submitted by a sub-committee to the Round Table discussion on Work with the Foreign Born at the Library Conference in Detroit. It has been pointed out that this list omitted the names of several well-known dealers in foreign books, and an explanation needs to be made in consideration of the fact that such omission might be considered as a reflection on the service given by such well-known houses by the library committee.

The facts are that the discussion was on library problems of book buying in the immigrant languages, and the report related to the book buying in less known tongues. The list was made with the idea that practically all libraries knew where to buy German, French, Italian and Spanish books, and that their difficulty lay in knowing the proper purchasing point for the countries in Eastern and Southeastern Europe. From that point of view the list was arranged.

THE DESIRABLE EQUIPMENT of the aviator from the viewpoint of physiological psychology is the main theme of a new book, "The Aviator," by H. C. McComas, which will be published early in November.

“Polluting The Springs”

A Discussion of Censorship from Another Viewpoint

UNDER the above heading, L. O. Hartman, Editor of Zion's Herald, publishes a leading editorial on the subject of censorship. This paper is the oldest of the Methodist Church papers, and the opinion is important as expressing the attitude of the intelligent leaders in church circles. It will be noticed that Mr. Hartman says that the most effective censorship is that of informed public opinion, and he calls on the leaders of the educational, religious, social and political world to act in heading off what he sees as a modern tendency toward sordidness. Whether the criticized book most under discussion justifies the opinion expressed or not, the article gives an important light on the line from which criticism may come.

“Literature thruout the ages has been remarkably free from degrading influences. Authors of salacious books in the past have been relatively few in number and have so retained vestiges of moral sense as to make use of the asterisk or the Latin language in the most offensive passages of their writings. But today we are cursed with a multitude of irresponsible who, not even sensing the existence of moral standards, have literally submerged the public in a sea of filth. With their literary poison these writers are polluting the springs of knowledge and deadening the incentives to decency, and should be classified as veritable assassins of high aspirations and noble motives.

The Acid Test

“The portrayal of the sordid side of life is frequently excused on the ground of the unusual honesty that characterizes those authors who picture things ‘as they are’ and record just ‘what they see.’ But is it honesty? Is it not the blatant realism of our modern day rather an indication of abysmal ignorance, of lack of insight, of a failure in thinking?

“Those authors who are equipped only with the physical senses, in the very nature of the case are incapable of seeing anything more in life than reminders of the jungle and the sty. But genuine interpreters, able to penetrate the realm of meanings, catch sight also of an inspiring idealism, which is just as real and potent as the animal instincts of mankind. It is strikingly true that we get out of life just about what we bring to it, and on this principle we are forced to the conclusion that the modern dabblers in sensual themes are simply projecting on the white pages of their books the darkness of their own benighted souls.

“The acid test for every address and every book dealing with such themes is the moral purpose dominating the discussion. There can be no criticism of those medical scientists who are devoting themselves conscientiously to the thoro study of psychoanalysis and seeking to bring new and important knowledge to the attention of their profession. What shall be said, however, of those writers whose object is simply to appeal to the morbid curiosity and the pornographic tendencies and neurotic men and women by producing books filled with degrading descriptions of clinical cases?

Censorship of Public Opinion

“In the coming generation of writers large numbers have sold out their moral instincts for messes of pottage—the royalties that come from best sellers. They have taken the short cut to success and must pay the penalty in their own souls. ‘Cheap, cheap, cheap!’ will be the cry of their self-accusation if ever these drivers of literary garbage wagons come to see themselves as they are.

“Freedom is the very genius of democracy. We want, therefore, no Index Librorum Prohibitorum. In the interest of general human welfare, however, society must be protected from commercialized purveyors of suggestive literature. Ought we to have a book censorship? Hitherto this has not been necessary because most writers have been big enough in their moral natures to be trusted. But within the last few years the claims of literary art, and even the promptings of conscience, have not been strong enough, singly or in combination, to hold some adventurers in this field to the standards of ordinary human decency. What is to be done?

“The most effective censorship is that of informed public opinion. Let leaders in the educational, religious, social and political world unite to expose the literary charlatans who have prostituted their abilities for the sake of the almighty dollar or a cheap popularity. And, just as reformers have fought the saloon and kindred evils, let all who have opportunity to mold the thinking of men and women struggle with the modern tendency toward sordidness in the printed page, until the natural human repugnance to things unclean is so mightily reenforced as to influence prospective readers both in their estimate of authors and in the buying of books.

"We are opposed to the use of force in the settlement of any problem, except as the very last expedient after every other means has been exhausted. Sentencing criminals to the penitentiary is a spectacle far from ideal, but society cannot afford to have its purposes wrecked by men and women who are bent on destroying property and life. A book censorship, likewise, is not a very appealing proposition to lovers of freedom; but if some such measure should become necessary for the protection of the young life in our midst, upon what reasonable grounds could it be opposed? Publishers and authors have it within their power to avert a situation that ultimately will compel all good citizens to unite in demanding a literary censorship. It is to be hoped that these leaders in the world of books may make such a step unnecessary by immediately endeavoring to put their house in order and to keep it clean.

American Legion Plans Education Week December 3-9

GARLAND W. POWELL, assistant national director of Americanism for the American Legion, has announced that American Education Week has been set for December 3 to 9 inclusive, according to an article in the New York Sun, September 28, 1922.

The announcement was made after a conference between President Harding, Powell, and John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education. President Harding, in promising his support, said he will issue a Presidential proclamation, which is to be followed by similar ones by Governors and Mayors.

In an attempt to have the Week observed on a larger scale than last year invitations have been sent to all national organizations engaged in educational work, chambers of commerce, clubs, and civic societies to co-operate in the work. Clergymen of all denominations will be urged to preach sermons, on Sunday December 3, on the benefits of education.

The American Legion will endeavor to have every citizen adopt an illiterate to the end that illiteracy may be entirely wiped out by 1927.

Each day of American Education Week will be devoted to some special purpose, such as, "Better-Paid Teachers," "Value of Physical Education," or "Anti-Bolshevist Day."

Extent of the Tie-up Between Motion Pictures and Books

WHILE every one realizes that more and more the motion picture producers are coming to depend upon well-known novels for their photoplays it is surprising to learn the extent of this movement. We have just received a list of novels which have been dramatized in motion pictures. The list contains about a hundred and ten titles and, of course, does not show the full extent of the tendency, as the list is limited to books which are copyrighted by the concern which issues the list.

It was particularly interesting to learn that of these one hundred and ten novels listed about forty-five are now published in editions containing illustrations from the motion pictures.

Booksellers are finding that sales can be greatly increased by keeping in touch with their local motion picture theater managers so as to have in stock books to supply the demand created by the motion picture version of a wide variety of titles.

Judge Talley's Talk to Booksellers

AT the October dinner of the New York Booksellers' League, given at the Hotel Brevoort on October 18th, the guest of honor, the Hon. Alfred J. Talley, Judge of the Court of General Sessions, delivered an eloquent and illuminating address on the administration of law in the criminal courts with reference to its safeguards and its difficulties, which held the close interest of the guests for more than an hour. He referred to the circulation of salacious books as follows:

"I like the story of the Juggler of Notre Dame. It tells of the little mountebank who danced and did his poor little tricks upon the street corners and at the country fairs, and who one evening as the shadows were falling was found in the great Cathedral of Paris dancing and juggling before the shrine of the Madonna, whose favor and intercession he sought. Then it was found that this was his prayer and that he was offering to Her the best that he had. This was his method of intercession, to give his best. May we not with profit emulate his example at the altar of good citizenship, and offer the best we have? If we be preachers, let us practice what we preach and by example prove a living sermon on the things we preach. If we be booksellers, let us hold up to scorn and obloquy, the publisher or seller who sends into any home filth, indecency or degeneracy, whether it be in the guise of a special limited edition or of a classic. To contend that rottenness in print is less obnoxious because it was written in another century overlooks the fact that once a thing becomes rotten it gets more putrid as time progresses."

The Nation's Poetry Contest

THE New York Nation offers an annual prize of one hundred dollars for the best poem submitted by an American poet between Thanksgiving and New Year's Day.

Briefly, the rules for the contest are, all manuscripts must be typewritten and bear the name of the author on each page, no more than three poems by the same author, and all poems must be in English.

Change of Date

THE November dinner of the New York Booksellers' League will be given on Friday evening, November 17, instead of the customary Wednesday evening. The guests of honor will be George Marsh, author of "Whelps of the Wolf," E. E. Calkins, the book sales booster and Vilhjalmur Stefansson who will talk on "Arctic Exploration."

CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK

November 12 - 18

A Village Library for Children

WHAT is probably the first library of its kind in the country, a children's library with separate building and devoted wholly to children's reading, is about to be erected in the village of Westbury, L. I. This town is the home of Mrs. Robert Bacon, and the library is to be a memorial to Colonel Robert Bacon, one time Ambassador to France.

The building is being specially planned by one of New York's leading architects, and the books have already begun to be assembled at Mrs. Bacon's home and prepared for the library by Miss Dalphin of the Rye Public Library. Colonel Bacon was always specially interested in children, and Mrs. Bacon has had much personal pleasure in working out this plan, in which she has had helpful consultation with Annie Carroll Moore, Supervisor of Work for Children in the New York Public Library. The library will have books for children of all ages, from picture books of every country up to radio and modern science.

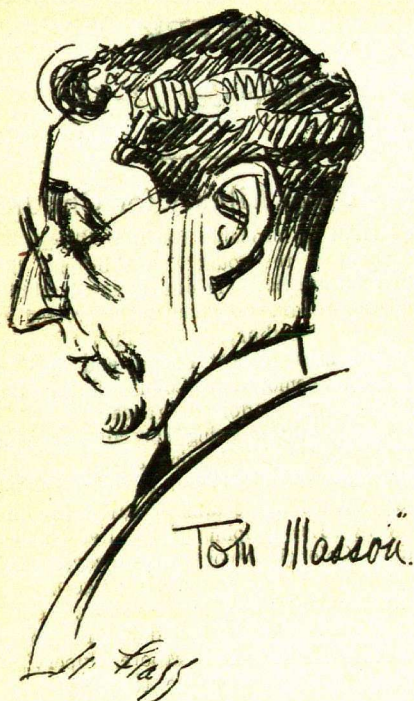

British Magazine Handicapped in Canada

THE publishers of British periodicals find many difficulties in their way in the Canadian market, according to the Canadian correspondent of the London Times.

Altho the war seriously affected the supply of British newspapers and magazines in Canada the demand now is greater than it ever was. But few British periodicals are sold over the counter as the American publications are. Because of the necessary delay from Great Britain, the lower price of the American publications due to their advertising revenue, the British publications cannot compete with American publications of similar type, the only ones that are successfully imported into Canada are such distinctive periodicals as the London Times, The Graphic, Sphere and a few others of undisputed quality.

The placing of a duty on American periodicals was suggested by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association but there is hardly a chance that the Canadian Government will so alter its policy for the benefit of one industry—and that a British one.

A Week's Gleanings of Book-Trade News

THE Saturday Evening Post added Thomas L. Masson to its regular list of editors, beginning with November. Mr. Masson, who was for twenty-five years the editor of Life, has been conducting a department for the past four months in the Post entitled "Short Turns and Encores," a department of humor, both prose and verse. The decided success of the department has been quickly apparent, and it is now a permanent feature.

MARUZEN & Co., of Tokyo, Japan, have just ordered three copies of the "Guide to Princeton." Doubtless this is another proof that the long impending Japanese invasion is at hand.

AN IMPORTANT book which Americanization workers and libraries will be glad to learn about has been published by the History Publishing Co., 301 Boggston Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa. It is a history of the United States in the Slovak by Jozef Hill, called "Dejiny Spojenych Statov Americkych."

ALFRED F. LOOMIS, author of that successful book of an adult playtime, "The Cruise of the Hippocampus," has gone into the juvenile field, and the Century Co., will bring out a book of his in the not distant future.

GERHART HAUPTMANN's novel, "Phantom," which has appeared serially in the Freeman, will soon be published in book form by Huebsch.

WASHINGTON never said anything about "entangling alliances" according to William Roscoe Thayer in his "George Washington." The phrase was first used by Thomas Jefferson in his inaugural address in 1801.

A BIOGRAPHY of William Dean Howells by Delmar Gross Cooke will soon be published by Dutton. Those who have read the manuscript regard it as an exceptionally fine piece of critical writing.

"BABY'S JOURNAL," which was formerly published by Scribners is now being published by the Universal Press, Chicago. The demand for the book has been so great that a second edition within a month has just gone to press.

"TIMOTHY'S QUEST," by Kate Douglas Wiggin, published over thirty years ago, has just been made into a motion picture. The film was first shown in Portland, Maine, October 16th and letters from the Governor and author were read.

"AN OUTLINE OF HUMOR," by Carolyn Wells, is in preparation, Putnam's announce. She insists that such an outline can be made, and that it will be in coherent, chronological and available form. She intends to detail the growth of humorous literature from the first available fragments, to the quips of the most modern funmakers.

THERE HAVE been very few books on Shakespeare in the last dozen years but this fall has seen more than a half dozen new volumes: Schüchling's "Character Problems in Shakespeare's Plays," (Holt) "A Life of Shakespeare" and "Pre-Shakespearean Plays," both by J. Q. Adams, published by Houghton, "Shakespeare Adaptations" by Summers (Small, Maynard) "Shakespeare and His Stage" by G. B. Harrison (Oxford); "Shakespeare and the Heart of a Child" by Gertrude Slaughter (Macmillan) "Bacon's Dial in Shakespeare" by N. R. Clark (Stewart Kidd); "The Shakespeare Garden" by E. Singleton (Century); "Shakespeare Source Plays" by F. P. Wilson (Oxford); "Shakespeare's Hamlet" by A. Clutton-Brock (Dutton) and others.

Obituary Notes

THOMAS NELSON PAGE, one of the best known in the galaxy of American authors, died suddenly while on a visit to his ancestral home, Oakland near Beaver Dam, Virginia, on November 1st. He was born on April 23, 1853, a descendant of Governor Page, a contemporary of Thomas Jefferson. After graduating from Washington and Lee University, he studied law and began practice when twenty-two years old. His first effort in fiction, "Marse Chan," was published in the Century Magazine, after which his stories came along with considerable rapidity and attained an enduring popularity. At one period he was connected with Harper's Magazine as editor of "The Drawer," and in 1913 he was appointed ambassador to Rome by President Wilson, who knew of his great interest in Italy, its art and literature. At this post he served during the World War and for two years after. His best-known books, of the thirty-four listed in the Scribner catalog, are: "In Ole Virginia," (1887); "Two Little Confederates," (1888); "The Old South," (1891); "Among the Camps," (1891); "Meh Lady"; "Marse Chan"; "Social Life in Old Virginia"; "The Old Gentleman of the Black Stock," (1896); "Red Rock," (1898); "Santa Claus's Partner," (1899); "A Captured Santa Claus," (1902); "Gordon Keith," (1903); "The Old Dominion—Her Making and Her Manners," (1908); "Tommy Trot's Visit to Santa Claus," (1908); "John Marvel, Assistant," (1909); "Robert E. Lee, Man and Soldier," (1912); "The Land of the Spirit," (1913); "Italy and the World War," (1920); "Dante and His Influence," (1922).

BERTRAM P. HUGGINS

BERTRAM P. HUGGINS, manager of the book room of Houghton Mifflin Company at 4 Park Street, Boston, for many years connected with the DeWolfe Fiske & Company and Jordan Marsh & Company, died on October 16th. Mr. Huggins had long been one of the well-known figures in the Boston book-trade, known to all travelers as well as to the retail trade.

Periodical Notes

THE INDEPENDENT offers to send to all its readers a free copy of its new publication, the Inter-Weekly. The new magazine is designed particularly to meet the needs of teachers and pupils in educational institutions but should be very interesting to every thoughtful reader.

The Editor-In-Chief of the Inter-Weekly is Franklin H. Giddings, Professor of Sociology, Columbia University. The twenty-four Associate Editors are all men very prominent in educational or literary work. The following are a few of the well-known persons who are contributors to the Inter-Weekly: Hendrik Van Loon, Herbert Hoover, John Masefield, Charles M. Schwab, Edith Wharton, Lord Dunsany, and Henry Van Dyke.

THE NEW issue of the American Jewish Year Book published by the Jewish Publication Society of America contains the names of at least a dozen book publishers and the names of two hundred and seventy-five writers and nine librarians.

The Weekly Record of New Publications

THIS list aims to be a complete and accurate record of American book publications. Pamphlets will be included only if of special value. Publishers should send copies of all books promptly for annotation and entry, and the receipt of advance copies insures record simultaneous with publication. The annotations are descriptive, not critical; intended to place not to judge the books. Pamphlet material and books of lesser trade interest are listed in smaller type.

The entry is transcribed from title page when the book is sent for record. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. When not specified the binding is cloth.

Imprint date is stated [or best available date, preferably copyright date, in bracket] only when it differs from year of entry. Copyright date is stated only when it differs from imprint date; otherwise simply "c." No ascertainable date is designated thus: [n. d.]

Sizes are indicated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); D. (12mo: 20 cm.); S. (16mo: 17½ cm.); T. (24mo: 15 cm.); Tf. (32mo: 13½ cm.); Ff. (48mo: 10 cm.); sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow.

Titles beginning with an unimportant word are inverted to be listed under their subject when possible.

Rare Books, Autographs and Prints

A SELECTION from the stock of H. Mischke, the well-known bookseller of this city, comprising works on art in every branch including bibliography, book-binding, colored plates, costume plates, engraving, etching, lithography, music, painting, pottery, porcelain, and typography, numbering 1753 lots, were sold at the Anderson Galleries, October 31 to November 3 inclusive, bringing $6,857.25.

The private library of Mrs. William F. Sheehan of this city comprising the works of notable English, American and French authors in collected sets of first editions and de luxe issues, colored plate books, art monographs, extra-illustrated books, manuscripts and association items of interest will be sold by the American Art Association at their new galleries at Madison Avenue and 57th Street, November 13.

Among many rare items to be sold at Sotheby's, November 13, is a manuscript of great American interest consisting of a circular letter dated July, 1773, with queries relating to the physiography, constitution, trade, mines, inhabitants, fortifications, Indians, etc., of the Colonies and islands in America, with the manuscript replies of the governors to the Secretary of State, all carefully preserved in two volumes.

Part I of the library of the late Henry Cady Sturges of this city, mainly of American literature and including poetry, plays, broadsides, fiction, authors of the South, West, and Pacific Coast as well as New England and the East, including many exceptionally rare lots, particularly those printed during and relating to the Revolutionary War, together with many books of special association interest, will be sold at the Anderson Galleries, November 20, 21 and 22 in afternoon and evening sessions. This part contains 1950 lots and is the largest of its kind that has yet appeared in the auction room and deserves the careful attention of collectors and the trade.

Henry E. Huntington recently purchased from Dr. Frank P. O'Brien his private collection of Beadle Dime Novels, consisting of upwards of 2100 titles. A few weeks ago, Dr. O'Brien created a sensation in literary circles by presenting about 1800 Dime Novels to the New York Public Library, which issued an illustrated catalog of the collection. Mr. Huntington made this purchase thru Mitchell Kennerley, president of the Anderson Galleries, and he states that when Mr. Huntington started for California a few days ago he took the entire collection with him on the train, and selected to read en route "California Joe; or the Angel of the Wilderness" and "Old Grizzly Adams, the Bear Tamer."

A brief description of the Gutenberg Bible appears in the current number of the Bulletin of the Public Library of Boston. The library has recently acquired from Gabriel Wells a portion of the Gutenberg Bible, the first book printed from movable types, the leaf being at the end of the twenty-seventh verse of the fourteenth chapter of Exodus and ending with the first part of the twenty-second verse of the sixteenth chapter. A facsimile of the leaf is given in the Bulletin, and the brief description points out that the specimens of the Gutenberg press "should be of interest to every member of the community as the earliest outcome of an art which more than any other single factor was responsible for the great intellectual awakening of the sixteenth century. Even one leaf is a precious and permanent record of the superb workmanship of nearly five hundred years ago which has never been surpassed."

"A Dictionary of Printers and Booksellers who were at work in England, Scotland, and Ireland from 1668 to 1725" is the most recent volume in the publication of the Bibliographical Society of London. It is the work of Henry R. Plomer, with the help of H. G. Aldis, E. R. McDix, G. J. Gray and R. B. McKerrrow, and is edited by Arundell Esdaile, and printed at the Oxford University Press in a square octavo of 342 pages. The volume is a continuation of the publication issued by the society in 1907 entitled, "A Dictionary of the Booksellers and Printers . . . from 1641 to 1667." The present volume covers the period marked by three important events of the English booktrade: The expiration of the Licensing Act of 1682 in the year 1695; the paper and pamphlet duties of 1696 and 1713 and the Copyright Act of 1700. As Mr. Plomer points out in his introduction, the effect of the first was the establishment of presses in many provincial towns so that by 1725 every important town in the kingdom had its printers. About the first thing these printers did was to establish a local newspaper. The imposition of the paper duties of 1696 and the stamp duties on pamphlets and newspapers in 1711 enabled the printers in Holland and Ireland to publish English books and put them on the English market cheaper than the English printers could do, while many newspapers, unable to pay the heavy tax of one penny a sheet or less and two pence on the one to six sheets, drove many newspapers out of business. The copyright act of 1709 was not easily workable, and while well meaning, merely made a trade in copy-right a feature of eighteenth century book-selling, but did little to stop literary piracy.

A new organization, the Archaeological Institute of Yucatan, including many wealthy and prominent Americans, has been formed to carry out a vast plan of exploration and archaeological work in the Yucatan Peninsula which was settled by the Mayas, who had reached the highest civilization of the Western Hemisphere until it was destroyed by the Spaniards in the sixteenth century. Remains of their writings in hieroglyphics are being deciphered and indicate clearly their migration into Yucatan about a thousand years ago. The thickness of their settlements indicate that they must have mastered intensive agriculture and a large part of the energies of the people must have been devoted to building. Scores of old cities have been explored and yet the work is said to have only just begun. Professor A. N. Tozzer of Harvard University, one of the officers of the association, says: "The Spanish priests, in their attempts to Christianize the natives, aimed especially to destroy all that pertained to the ancient teaching. Accounts tell of the large number of manuscripts burned, and all owing to the mis-directed zeal of the Spanish missionaries. The greater part of the documents still in existence are in European libraries altho a few still remain in the public and private libraries of Mexico. The manuscripts are usually written on long strips of deer-skin, fastened together end to end, or on strips of bark or Maguey fibre, the whole strip in most cases folded up like a screen. Both the pre-Columbian and post-Columbian manuscripts contain records of a historical nature, accounts of migrations, the succession of rulers, campaigns and lists of tributes. Different phases of the ancient religion and calendar are shown, the secular and sacred calendar, astronomical calculations, the methods of divination of lucky and unlucky days, and the religious ceremonies." With the return of peace and stable conditions in Yucatan and Mexico an effort will be made to preserve the famous Maya ruins and to attract tourists to Uxmal and Chichen-Itza, the two most accessible of the cities.

Books Wanted and For Sale

Under these headings subscribers are charged 15c a line (no charge for address); non-subscribers 20c a line, address extra. Bills for this service will be rendered monthly. Objectionable books are excluded as far as they are noted.

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent. or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: NONE.

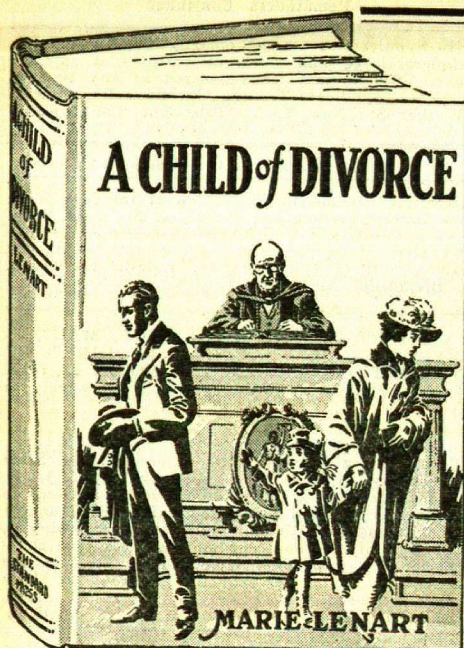

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders, and security holders if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company, but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

A Gripping Tale of Modern Life

With keen and incisive pen Miss LeNart handles the paramount social problem of the times.

In the background always are the world and the church; the former harsh and unrelenting, driving the sinner and the sinned—against despairingly on; the latter, for the most part, weak and vacillating, failing to meet the social needs of the hour.

The plot is daring, the story is enthralling, and the result is a powerful treatise against divorce.

BOOKS=====THE WOMANS PRESS=====BOOKSTHE GIRLS' YEAR BOOK

This book is to be used every day in the year. The prayers, Bible readings and thoughtful questions make us realize that Christianity must be above all things applied to the practical details of every-day life. 75 cents

FOLK SONGS OF MANY PEOPLE—Volume II

Compiled by Florence Hudson Botsford

This second volume of Folk Songs contains the songs of the Near and Far East, the Americas, The British Isles, Western Europe and of the Jews. The poetic versions of the translations, as in the first volume, have been made by the leading poets of to-day. Volume II will be even more popular than Volume I because of the large collection of the songs of Italy.

WOMEN AT THE WORLDS CROSS ROADS

By A. Maude Royden

Miss Royden is supremely interested in the opportunity for women in the changing order. The fact that she is to lecture in many parts of the country next year adds interest to this book based on her addresses given at the National Convention of the Young Women's Christian Association. THE STREET OF PRECIOUS PEARLS

By Nora Waln

"The Street of Precious Pearls" is in Peking. In a little shop on this dark side street—Y en Kuei Ping's honorable grandmother bargains for the wedding pearls of her much beloved granddaughter. The fragrance of magnolia blossoms, the pungency of incense, the meeting of Eastern tradition and Western ideals of freedom leave another vivid memory of China. 75 cents
